PERSONAL AND SOCIETY.

Another busy social week has just closed. The English 5 o'clock tea is being revived. The guests are few and are all seated at once, and the refreshments are a little more elaborate than for the earlier stand-up teas, when tea, ices and cake, with a rosebud, were passed. One is so much more comfortable, when seated with a group of friends, and talking, than where running the risk of being pushed in any direction by the crowded company. There is nothing a woman enjoys more in a social way than a few friends in for a tea-drinking. The cosy home, the stimulating beverage and the quiet gossip cheer her as no other form of entertainment can. But they have become selfish in this matter in taking all the social life to themselves and leaving the men out. Quite a number of men have confessed that they are becoming tired of having the women receive all of the invitations, and they seldom, if ever, to get any. But the reverse will soon be the cry, for the men will have companies, and as they generally carry the pocket-books, the wives and daughters will long to be invited to some of the elegant entertainments that they will hear of, but not attend. The initiative has been taken. Mr. Nathan Morris gave a very handsome dinner party to gentlemen only, on Tuesday night, and others may be expected to follow suit, and, if the truth must be told, the ladies' dinners are very meagre affairs beside those that the gentlemen enjoy. The proverbial rush that Americans are always said to be in is not conducive to making the average business man an accomplished diner-out. Where three or four hours are consumed in discussing the five, six or more courses which are prepared for such occasions, he is not expected to "bolt" as if he had twenty minutes for refreshments and had to catch a train. It requires as much thought and determination to make some people take things slowly and quietly as it does others to see how soon some certain act can be accom-

Novel ways of serving refreshments are sometimes introduced and one wonders why it was not thought of long ago. At a tea given last week Saratoga potatoes were a part of the menu. Every one knows how difficult it is to be helped or help yourself to these, and the trouble was overcome by each guest having her potatoes in a separate receptacle. A small, round paper basket was made, lined with oiled paper, and a fine fringe of tissue paper covered the edge completely. These were filled and one served to each guest. They were pretty and convenient and very much admired by the com-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

The First "Offensive Partisan." To the Editor of the Indianapolis Journat Perhaps you baven't thought that Sackville West is the first Democrat removed as an offen-sive partisan. I think it worth sending; if it does no good 'twill do no harm. G. R. W. SANDUSKY, O., Nov. 2.

The First Indiana Sunday-School. To the Editor of the Indianapolis Journal: In your issue of the 26th inst. it is stated in an obituary of Mrs. Mary C. Naylor, of Crawfordsville, that "she taught the class in the first Sabbath-school in Indiana in Indianapolis, in 1825." This is a mistake. The first Sabbath-school in

This is a mistake. The first Sabbath-school in Indiana was organized in the year 1819, at New Albany, by the Rev. Isaac Rud. The first Presbyterian Church in Indianapolis was not organized until the 5th day of July, 1823, the second year of the settlement of the place. The meeting at which the organization took place was held in a cabinet-maker's shop, Saturday afternoon. The Revs. Rud and Proctor were present, the latter having engaged to preach for that people for one year. Hence the truth probably is that Mrs. Naylor taught a class in the first Sabbath-school in Indianapolis, but not in the first Sabbath-school in the State.

BROOKVILLE, Ind., Oct. 29. W. H. MOORE. A Card from Wm. C. Herron.

My attention has been called to what "Mac" reported in his Indianapolis telegram to the Enquirer, of yesterday's issue, of what I said regarding the election in Indiana. I deny emphatically the statements therein imputed to me, and unhesitatingly and unreservedly pronounce them false in every partic-

To the Editor of the Indianapolis Journal:

I was in Indianapolis from 11:30 A. M. Wednesday, until 4 P. M. Thursday, on private business. I had no interview with the Republican committee, except through Mr. W. H. Smith, and my sole business with him was to draw the committee's attention to the Denver iron casting job, which went abroad, because the for-eigners could undersell the American foundry-men on account of their cheaper labor. My house has no foundry, nor any interest in one anywhere, and we had no more interest in the matter than every patriotic American citizen, Democrat or Republican, should feel when the protection we already enjoy is found inadequate to admit our manufacturers competing with the fereign, and permit them to pay their employes the wages current in this country. Prior to my visit to Indianapolis I had not falt perfectly sure we would carry felt perfectly sure we would earry Indiana, but from what I heard at the committee rooms and outside, and from sources I deem trustworthy, my doubts are dissipated, and the statement that I could "get nothing to encoursge me," that "it is nothing but discouragement all around," and that "this is an uphill fight, and I am afraid we will lose," are simply un-true, and the manufacture of Mr. MacBride or some other Democrat who must be thoroughly unscrupulous. My intimate friends would need no denial of the statement, but my numerous acquaintances may feel I should thus correct the false statements referred to.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 2. WM. C. HERRON.

Justice to Gen. Harrison. To the Editor of the Indianapolis Journal: The determination of the leaders of the Democratic party to not do justice to General Harrison is now so clearly apparent that it has increased the number of his admirers and heightened the estimate of his abilities. "Those who refuse to do justice to merited honor repudiate the rewards due to a life of virtue."

A gentleman prominently connected with the Democratic campaign, as an excuse for distributing falsehoods against General Harrison, said, "He is not a great man anyway." It would be hard to furnish any proof of true greatness that General Harrison has not furnished. Few men ever more fully earned a title to distinction than he has, and but few men have ever received fuller evidence of public regard. He has kindled an enthusiasm that has fired the hearts of the people from Maine to California, and drifted to him a crowd of admirers which burdened the public conveyances to his city. Veterans who with him struggled for the life of the Nation. Old men who, near a half century ago, paid a like tribute to his grand sire. Beautiful women come with their smiles. Hard-handed mechanics come with emblems of their craft. Every department of business come to own him as a champion of protection to American industry. the friend of the laborer. Irishmen come to own their devotion to his ability, and his friendship to the oppressed. Germans come to see the man whom they wish to guard the destiny of the land of their addoption. Even children come to see the man whose life they might live

After all these have given testimony to the worth of General Harrison, Democrats call for additional evidence. Will they read the many hundred speeches he which demand an expression of his opinion upon all of the questions of the day and pertaining to almost every department of thought? After reading them carefully, point your finger to one objectionable word he uttered: arraign him if you can for one mistake he made. Can any stronger proof be given of the most worderful ability to comprehend questions, master problems and meet emergencies? Still some Democrats lack generosity enough to do General Harrison justice. They see no evidence of his claims to consecration sufficiently ample to protect him from falsehood and scandal. J. W. HERVEY. INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 3, 1888.

Harrison Did It.

To the Editor of the Indianapolis Journal:

In an office of an Indiana hotel sat a number of commercial travelers. Soon the conversation drifted into the "issues of the day." One of the number, a Democrat, made the statement that he thought most friends of General Harrison put too much stress upon his moral life, as that should have nothing to do with a man's qualification for President. Quietly seated at the writing-desk was another drummer, who, upon hearing the remark of this man, put down his pen and stepped into the center of the floor and asked the group surrounding him to accord him their attention. Thinking, perhaps, he wished to make a speech upon the questions of the day, "the boys" were all attention. Said he: "Boys, at one time in the history of a certain young man's life, there was not a single man, living in the city of Indianapolis, who had got lower down in the scale of degradation than did that young man. That young man had at one time s good a position on the road as any man now before me, and so low down did he get that all he had left was a heart-broken wife. His house had replaced him by another, and down, and down did the young man go until all hope had left him of ever having another chance of redear, leving wife prevailed upon him to accom- lished. pany her to Sabbath-school," said this drummer. "wife and husband went arm-in-arm, and were ushered into a class of young people. The teacher was a man of stately bearing, a man that had only words of love to offer-and that man was Ben Harrison. From that date the young man's life took a change for the better. He and his wife went to their home, fully resolved, from that hour, that there was a chance for him. The wife went, early the next day, to the wholesale house that her husband had been formerly employed in, and told the proprietors what a change had come over her husband, and, for God's sake, to try her dear boy again. Well." said the drummer, "that man was taken back, the sun shone out before him, and he went on and upward until, to-day, he has a good home, all paid for, a happy wife and loving children about him, and also a good, paying trade, with a salary which enables him to lay up for old age. That same young man stands now before you, and he does not hesitate in saying that when one makes the statement that there is too much stress laid upon the moral life of General Harrison, he does not know the man." At the conclusion of the drummer's remarks, all joined in with the young man just on the floor that he was right.

BITS OF FOREIGN GOSSIP.

All Paris indulges in "great expectations," based upon the exposition of next summer. It is understood that the Duchess of Maria borough does not sanction the sale of her photographs in London. Tennyson is reported to be more and more of a recluse, and those armed with letters and cards to visit him are often disappointed. Upon Albert Victor, son of the Prince of Wales, is conferred the dublous distinction of being the conspicuous dude of the royal family. A prize at a rifle competition among the volunteers of Maldon was a lady's gold wedding ring with the additional "guarantee of a free marriage fee."

The authorities of Portsmouth, England, have built a swimming bath for pauper children, who will all be required to learn to swim as a part of their regular schooling. The English plunging championship was won on Oct. 8, by G. A. Blake, with a plunge of 71 feet 3 inches. Two days before he had made the unprecedented plung of 75 feet 7 inches. Pauline Lucca says that her coming American tour will end her career on the stage. She has bought a villa at Gmunden, where she intends opening a school for opera singers. There are inscribed in the Paris Faculty of Medicine, for the session of 1888, 114 female students-including 1 American, 8 English, 1

"Weighty thoughts" will no longer be mere figments of the imagination. An Italian has invented a balance upon which even dreams or the effects of a slight sound during sleep turns blood enough to the brain to produce a measure-

Dr. Charcot, the great French physician, says that children under sixteen cannot have their brains overworked. No forcing, he asserts, will get out of them more cerebral work than the brain will accomplish without fatigue. It is not till after the age of sixteen or eighteen that surmenage becomes possible.

Declining the Half-Loaf. Indians Christian Advocate.

A most brutal murder was committed at Elkhart, a few days ago. A drunken vagabond shot a policeman who was arresting him. Of itself there is nothing remarkable in this, for something like it is almost an every-day occurrence. In this case there is, however, this fact worthy of note: If Elkhart county had a chance it would vote out and keep out every saloon under a local-option law. Yet two years ago there were 217 professed temperance men in that county who voted against allowing this to be done, preferring the present order of things to anything short of prohibition, State and national; and probably half that number will vote the same way again. It must be a strange conscience that teaches such logic. Is not the man who protects the saloon, when he might forbid it-if it be but one single saloon-as criminal as the saloon man himself?
